

EAT ART

An Art Ain't Innocent Film

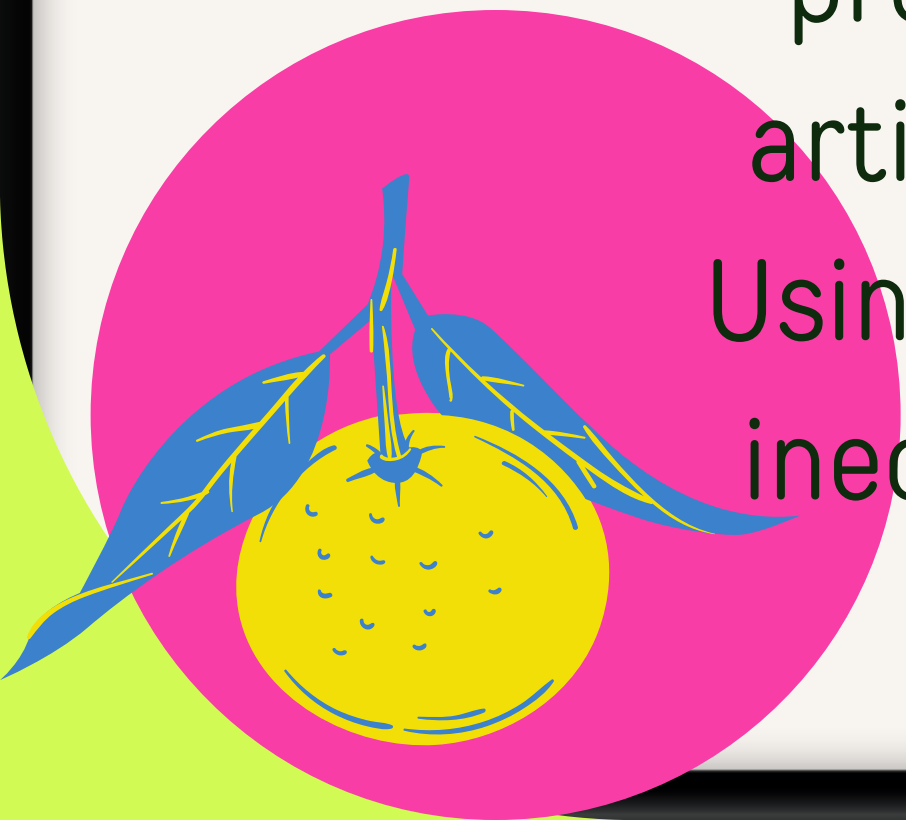

RESOURCES

Building A New Future for Artists

Eat Art tackles the art world inequity of not properly paying artists for their work. Too often artists are offered exposure instead of payment. Using an absurdist lens, this film highlights these inequities, shares artists' stories, and points to a different, more sustainable future.

Art Ain't Innocent

We are a multi-racial, cross-class, Southern arts visioning collective based in Durham, NC. Since 2018 we have been catalyzing conversations and actions around inequities in the art world, envisioning a more equitable future for us all.

Eat Art's Many Uses:

Educate audiences, institutions and other artists about the dire need to properly compensate artists.

Encourage artists to see their value and ask for proper payment.

Invite everyone into envisioning new ways to support artists.

Escalate when art institutions don't respond.

Educate

Encourage

Invite

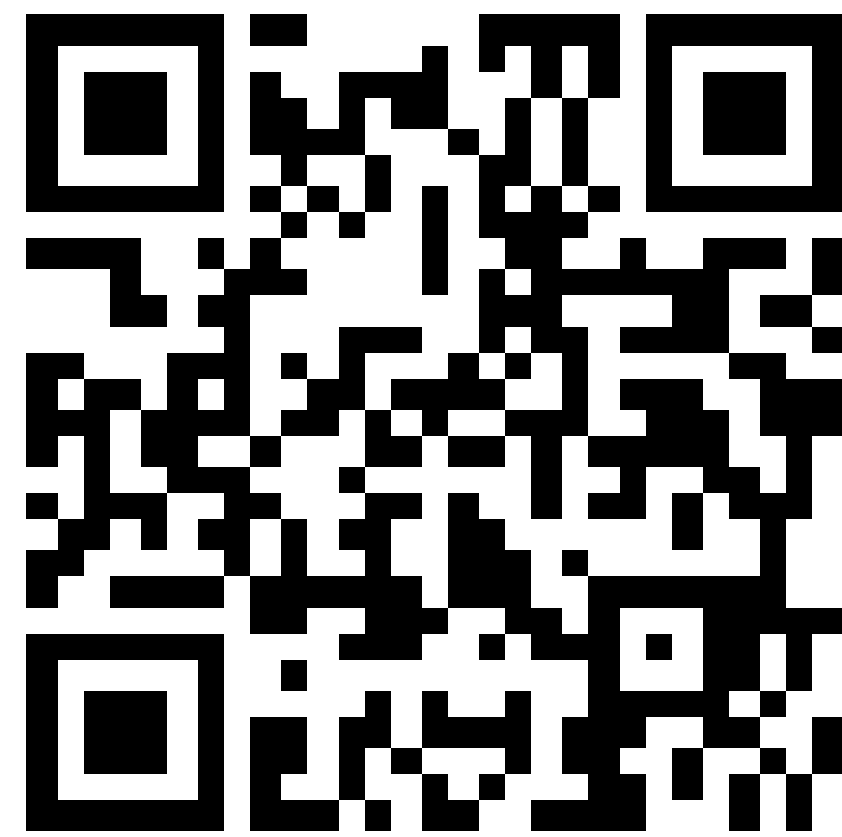

Escalate

03

04

Learn More + Watch the Film

artaintinnocent.com/eat-art

